PLATE SIXTEEN.

THIS example of small town house is quite typical of those built in Alexandria during Colonial times. It is so located that the front commands a beautiful view of the Potomac River. The brickwork of greatly variegated tones of red and brown gives a rich, contrasting background to the white woodwork of the doorway and the trim of the windows. The dormers are particularly interesting with the pleasing silhouettes formed by the pediments; their sides and roofs and the roof of the house are covered with gray slate. The exceptionally good cornice is of the type that is most characteristic of those used during the Colonial period.
